The Oil & Gas Innovation Center is a web based service providing corporate subscribers with detailed information about new technologies developed in other industries, but having applicability in the petroleum industry. The above image from the subscriber area of the web site is a profile of a specific technology.

The profile includes a synopsis of the technology, a PowerPoint supplied by the technology company, a podcast interview with the company and full contact information. Other profiles may also include videos and written Q&A transcripts.

Technologies highlighted on the web site are either commercially available or nearing this threshold. An emphasis is also placed on R&D breakthroughs from outside of the petroleum industry centers.

The Oil & Gas Innovation Center is available to both U.S. and international companies. Corporations subscribe as either sponsors or members. Sponsor logos are displayed on the web site. Both sponsors and members have full access to the site content.

All of the content on the site is divided into six categories. In addition, the site has an internal search engine. The web site is also structured to allow multiple users from each corporate subscriber.
